British royalty resides in Haliburton

DARREN LUM
County Life staff

Sitting in the front seat behind the steering wheel, Dennis Casey shows off the various switches and buttons inside the sparse cabin of his 1962 Land Rover Series IIa.

"I find this kind of funny here," he said, pointing to a button on the dash, grinning. "All the cars now come with push button starters. These ones had them in 1962."

It's one of many characteristic features of this iconic British import. The fabled classic Land Rover is in a class of its own, a royal class. Think of the Queen, a safari or the African veldt and people picture a Land Rover. Its handmade quality is a throwback. The robustness and outdoor capability easily fits into the rugged surroundings of the Highlands.

Casey is an old school kind of guy with a no-nonsense approach to people and to life.

Some people think of dogs and their owners resembling each other. With Casey, it's his Land Rover. There's an undeniable honesty about the farm-like practicality of it.

It's function over form by a large degree for the original sports utility vehicle, but it's beautiful to the Dysart et al councillor.

"The style of them. The simplicity of them," he said.

Casey bought the 2.25-litre four-cylinder powered

Unlike contemporary Land Rovers, the 1962 Land Rover Series IIa does not have air conditioning, unless you count these two front air vent openings. Owner Dennis Casey loves his truck for its simplicity and unique features. /DARREN LUM Staff

Truck's history still mostly a mystery

classic close to eight years ago from a guy in Madoc, who restored Land Rovers. This one was his vehicle.

Initially the mechanic wanted more money than Casey was willing to part with. After a few phone calls and a couple of visits, he managed to get the asking price reduced by a few thousand dollars and bought it. With a little research, Casey learned his vehicle served in the British army and came out of the famous Solihull Warwickshire factory in England. Other than that, he doesn't know much about its history.

The Land Rover was something he always wanted. He spent two years searching, discovering the rarity of it. At that time, there were a lot of people looking to buy them.

Ownership has been straightforward, he said. It's easy to work on for the most part. What he can't do he gets his local mechanic in Haliburton to perform. Parts are relatively easy to get. He has a supplier based in Vermont and for rare parts, who knows a company in Britain.

Unlike some owners, who really test the driving limits of the vehicle, Casey just enjoys trips close to his home around the village.

"It's kind of a town car. You know, I go to the store," he said.

Driving the stiffly suspended right-hand drive vehicle is a different experience.

"Never drove a right-hand drive. It was just something I wanted to try," he said.

Although he enjoys driving from the right seat, he admits there is a challenge to driving the nine-seater with a canvas cloth top.

"Where you run into a problem is with the mirrors because it's just so different. Even after having it for that long because you're so used to [the left mirror being close] ... now the [left] mirror is way over there. And you really have to stop and think and kind of get your head lined up before you back up," he said.

It's an experience his wife Roxanne had once. That was enough for her. Casey said it's like riding "a Sherman tank." It doesn't have seat belts or a roof (not counting the textile one).

"She had one ride in it the day I brought it home," he said.

Casey doesn't think of himself as a car guy so much as a man that always wanted a classic Land Rover.

"This is my mid-life crisis [car]," he said.

Meeting people is always welcomed. Even when it is under a veil of a joke.

"I get right enjoyment out of if you're parking in the Foodland. It happens about once a summer. Somebody in a ... 2015 Land Rover will pull up and I'll say to them, 'What's that?' Then [they do a double-take]. That happens and you get into conversations with people," he said, smiling from ear to ear.

Haliburton resident Dennis Casey loves his 1962 Land Rover Series IIa truck for its simplicity and unique features. Although the off-road vehicle isn't taken far from town to have its capabilities tested, Casey still loves knowing the truck will never get stuck. /DARREN LUM Staff

The instrument cluster of the 1962 Land Rover Series IIa is a practice in simplicity. It's one of the characteristics that is greatly appreciated by its owner Dennis Casey.

The river, history and chocolate cake

GEORGE FARRELL
Special to County Life

While sitting by the shores of the Gull River recently, my thoughts were of the inexorable flow of water, from time immemorial into the uncertain future, and while looking across at the Clergy House, perhaps the oldest building in the county, I wondered how many people, no longer with us, had done exactly the same thing.

I thought then of the indigenous peoples who frequented these waters in search of fish and game. Later it was the European explorers, lumbermen and settlers, dealing with the elements, the river providing for them too, with sustenance and transportation.

I was feeling so very insignificant, and these reflective, existential, stream-of-consciousness thoughts, were brought on, no doubt, by recent happenings in my life; like the flooding in Minden which saw my father stay with us for two weeks. Watching him every day, realizing just how much time had changed him; my mother falling and breaking another bone, and the effect that was having on Dad. I thought about his recent move to Hyland Crest, the long-term care facility, where he joined my mom, and our own imminent relocation from Gelert, where we've lived for 30 years, to my parents' former place on the flood plain which is Invergordon Avenue.

These life-changing events can cause an introspective evaluation, a reckoning, a seeking of a sense of worth, of contributions and legacies, and of a morbid realization of the paucity of one's own numbered days. History and one's place in it are forced to the front of the mind, and my thoughts inexplicably danced to the recent Haliburton County Fair. It was the 153rd edition and I was in charge of promoting the music, so in a way I considered myself part of the history of that event. Though I hoped it wouldn't be my only legacy, I couldn't help but wonder whether the fair would still be happening after I was no longer walking this earth.

Later, on the same day that I sat musing riverside, Michelle and I went up to Hyland Crest, to visit the folks on Dad's 94th birthday. The previous day we'd made a trip to Orillia, travelling along what used to be called the Monck Road, a colonization and military route that once was the only east/west artery in and out of Haliburton County. While in Orillia we picked up a wickedly calorific chocolate birthday cake for Dad. We'd arranged with Hyland Crest staff to secure the Fireside Lounge, one of the very nice activity rooms, for our little birthday get-together. The meal would consist of pad thai noodles, with extra shrimp, and a mango salad, from Suwan's Thai Cuisine.

While driving ourselves and the food from Suwan's to Hyland Crest my mind was still processing random historic and cultural thoughts, during which we passed the house that at one time belonged to Francis "Frank" Welch (b 1904). The Welches are a founding family in Minden and Frank was, at one time or another, the owner/operator of the John Welch and Son Funeral Home, clerk/treasurer of the County of Haliburton, as well as reeve of Anson, Hinden, and Minden townships.

It was Welch who rented space to renowned artist André Lapine in the artist's latter years, and received from the artist more than 40 paintings in lieu of rent. That collection ultimately led to the building of the Agnes Jamieson Gallery and the Minden Hills Cultural Centre.

Back to Hyland Crest, where, while walking the halls on the way to Dad's birthday supper, I saw two residents, that in the recent past I had dealings with; a well-known local author and a very good poet. "There, but for fortune…" thought I, while almost simultaneously giving thanks for the existence of the facility and acknowledging it to be a very good one.

As we four sat and ate our noodles, and drank celebratory glasses of wine, our conversation consisted mainly of family members who could not be with us, the weather, and as always, the Gull River. When would it overflow again?

Then it was time for dessert. Dad's eyes glowed with the lighting of the four candles atop the cake, the additional 90 being a "given." With intense delight he blew out one candle at a time, and I couldn't help but wonder at the significance of that.

Gearing up for the Highland Yard

CHAD INGRAM

County Life staff

The 46th annual Highland Yard road race will be taking place in Minden on the morning of Sunday, Aug. 6.

For the past few years, the race has been a fundraiser for local affordable housing organization Places for People.

"You can see here what a tradition it is for people, doing this race," said organizer Jack Russel in a presentation to Minden Hills council June 8.

Forty-five per cent of participants last year had done the event three to five times and 14 per cent had done it more than 15 times. One participant had run the race for 39 years.

"We have two participants who are in their 80s . . . and they raise a lot of money for us," Russel said.

The day includes two-, five- and 10-kilometre races.

Places for People operates properties in Haliburton, Carnarvon and Minden and is working on a project in Highlands East. A second Minden location will also open in a building on property owned by Haliburton Highlands Health Services.

At present, the Places for People properties house seven adults and 19 children. The organization, which renovated its first property in 2009, has graduated seven families, five of them into home ownership.

The two-kilometre runners start their race at last year's Highland Yard in Minden. /HUW MORGAN Special to County life

The beat goes on at Rails End

LAURIE JONES
Special to County Life

A DRUMMER WAS asked what he'd do if he won a million dollars. He answered, "I'd keep playing til the money ran out. "

Ten years ago I would not have seen the humour in this little joke. Today I get it. Because, today I AM A DRUMMER!

My transition from wannabe drummer to enthusiastic participant and rhythmaniac began at Rails End Gallery and Arts Centre in 2006. Bazza Hayward, former Rails End board president, musician, teacher and corporate escapee asked me if he could lead a drum circle in the main gallery. "Sure, you can use the space," said I, "this place could use some good vibes; but I've never felt comfortable with a drum, so I probably won't take part." Bazza was quick to dismiss my fear with a hug saying "You have a heartbeat darlin'… so you are already a drummer." The rest is history.

Fast forward to 2017 and our public art gallery is alive with rhythmic potential! Djembes, doumbecs, ashikos, congas, cowbells, cajons, chimes, shakers, bodhrans, bongos, ugly sticks, snares, rattles, tambourines all dwell happily together on the shelf in readiness. Weekly drum circles enliven the space with vibrant sounds, harmonies and entrancing patterns. We loan drums, make drums, give them good homes and teach people how to play them. We even have a drum committee whose mission is to introduce people to the awesomeness of rhythm in community. Haliburton DrumFest is a new festival the Rails End Drum Committee has in the works. Over the long Haliburton winter, Joe Truss workshopped a course called "Rhythmeering" and out popped a drum troupe!

My education continues. Cultural mash-up is now part of my vocabulary and I am learning about the red hot topic of cultural misappropriation as we explore drum culture, shared and new traditions and make music in community with one another at Rails End. Some say rhythm is the basis, and literally the origin of music and harmony. Rails End Gallery invites you to experience rhythm with us this summer. Last August we produced our first DrumFest. It was called Halibana. Fellow musicians from Caribbean Community Engagement, a group dedicated to sharing cultural traditions of the Caribbean, came to town to work with us. We danced a grassroots procession adorned as birds, black flies, canoes and seasons through the park tripping along to the beat of the drums. It was a warm and joyful celebration! This summer Rails End Gallery will host Haliburton DrumFest. It's shaping up to be multi-cultural celebration of rhythm in community for the whole family and takes place Saturday, Sept. 2 (Labour Day weekend) in Head Lake Park. There will be a free concert at the Bandshell with a variety of cultural rhythms, international and local foods, costume-making, a children's sound garden, stilt-walking and general merry-making! This family friendly event is supported by Rails End, Haliburton County Development Corporation, Human Resources Development Canada, Caribbean Community Engagement and individual donors. If you are a food vendor, percussion or drum maker or musician interested in participating please contact me at 705-457-2330 or info@railsendgallery.com.

Laurie Jones is the curator at Rails End Gallery and Arts Centre, www.railsendgallery.com.

Not my first rodeo

STEVE GALEA
Humour Columnist

WITH THE Ram Rodeo coming to Minden, I am reminded that while I have never intentionally participated in a rodeo, I have picked up a bit of rodeo wisdom along the way.

Here are a few things I'm happy to pass along.

1. Given the choice it's always better to ride Young Diablo.
2. There's never a barrel and rodeo clowns around when you really need them.
3. Eight seconds can be an awfully long time.
4. Listen carefully to the event instructions or you might find yourself being arrested for team groping.
5. Try as you might, you cannot steer a steer.
6. Steer wrestling is hard enough without attempting to put it in an airplane spin.
7. A bucking bronc will happily throw you in a pile of bucking horse manure.
8. Wearing red from head to toe will never get you the kind of attention you want.
9. Don't take all the credit. As soon as you successfully lasso a bull, hand the rope to the next guy.
10. It's bareback riding, not bear back riding.

Make it personal

JANICE BISHOP
Cottage Rental Expert

MAKING A personal connection will start your renter's holiday off on the right foot. It creates a positive mindset that will last their entire vacation.

Cottage rental agencies take the time to get to know your renters so they already have an established relationship before they come to your cottage. If you are handling your own rentals, it will be your responsibility to establish this relationship.

Chat with your renters a few times before they come to your cottage. Establish a relationship. You want renters to feel comfortable calling you with problems. This communication is important as small problems can become large problems. Your efforts will be well rewarded. Renters make more of an effort to clean when they are dealing with people instead of corporations.

First impressions count. When renters step into your cottage and see a personal note, a bottle of wine, or a plate of cookies, it creates good will. It instantly converts their experience from renter to welcomed guest.

It's the personal touches that make cottage rentals special. Each cottage is equipped with a unique blend of extras such as spices in the cupboards, DVDs, games, toys… they all add to the enjoyment of your cottage.

Janice Bishop is the owner of All-Season Cottage Rentals and has worked within the tourism industry for over 40 years.

Helping Ensure Your Well Water is Up to the Test

By Melissa Ivey, Public Health Inspector

Drinking water... it's something you can easily take for granted until something goes wrong.

Preventing E.coli and other bacteria from contaminating drinking water is essential for public health. It's why municipal drinking water systems have clearly defined regulations governing treatment and maintenance.

If you get your drinking water from a private well, the responsibility for its quality and safety falls squarely on you. In this area – City of Kawartha Lakes, Haliburton County and Northumberland County – more than half of all people rely on private wells for their drinking water. A fundamental question to ask is: how well is your well water?

The Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge District Health Unit can help with the answer. In 2016, thousands of local residents took advantage of our free well-water testing program. The program lets private well owners take a sample of their well water and have it tested for E.coli and other bacteria. To take part, you simply pick up water-testing bottles and kits from your nearest Health Unit office or municipal building, follow the instructions, and return the filled bottle with completed forms.

We take care of the rest by forwarding the water samples to the provincial lab in Peterborough for testing. The lab results will then be sent to you by phone or mail.

If you receive adverse or unsatisfactory water results, speak to a public health inspector at the Health Unit. We can help you understand the results, recommend solutions, and give advice on how to fix potential problems with your well. Getting your well water tested regularly throughout the year is essential to alert you to problems with your drinking water that can affect the health of you and your loved ones.

Helping you stay 'well' informed – just another way the Health Unit is your health partner for life!

Quit-Smoking Partnership Helps Cobourg Woman Breathe Easier

Cobourg resident Rose Belfry is delighted her tobacco habit has gone up in smoke, thanks to a unique partnership among local agencies.

Last summer, Belfry decided to quit smoking to get back in shape to play baseball and hockey. Back then, she was smoking half-a-pack of cigarettes each day. Belfry's timing was perfect, as a quit-smoking program was starting up in Fall 2016.

The quit-smoking program was offered to Belfry and other members of a support group run by the Assertive Community Treatment Team (ACTT) at Northumberland Hills Hospital. At ACTT's request, the Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge District Health Unit and Port Hope Northumberland Community Health Centre teamed up to run the program, providing quit-smoking tips and resources, as well as free nicotine patches, to participants.

"The quit-smoking program is a great example of how local health care agencies can pull resources together and work towards a common goal," says Stephanie Logan, a Health Promoter with the HKPR District Health Unit who helped lead the quit-smoking group. "It was a really good group, lively and engaged. We had really good success there, with some participants quitting and many others reducing their tobacco use."

Through a combination of willpower, nicotine patches, peer support and coping tips learned in the quit-smoking program, Belfry gave up smoking. "It was such a positive experience, with everyone being very supportive of each other," Belfry says. "It made life a whole lot easier to quit. Everyone looked forward to the group, and it really helped everyone through the quit process."

Belfry also noticed the difference being smoke-free made when she laced up her skates this past winter. "The less I smoked, the better I felt," she notes.

Cobourg resident Rose Belfry credits the assistance she received – in part from the Health Unit – for helping her quit smoking.

Reel Paddling brings out real fans

SUE TIFFIN
County Life staff

Kayakers, canoeists and SUP surfers bought almost every ticket for the 12th annual Reel Paddling Film Festival held on June 9 at the Northern Lights Performing Arts Pavilion in Haliburton.

Nine films were shown at the event, which was presented by Algonquin Outfitters and helped raise funds for the Fix the Gull fundraising project initiated by WhiteWater Ontario.

Organizers said the first time the festival opened in Haliburton, 35 people showed up. This year, almost 200 people attended. Guests mingled outside the theatre before the show to enjoy food sampling and learn more about outdoor equipment and local area highlights before settling in for the night of films.

"We love paddling, so we love films about paddling," said Doug Norris of Maple Lake.

Kaitlynne Fischer, a 12-year-old JDHES student, was at the festival with her sister, Rachel, and her dad. She said she goes canoeing every summer in Eagle Lake with her family, though she prefers kayaking.

"I've always been interested in this," she said. "I like seeing videos of it on YouTube. Depending on the angle, it makes it seem like you're there, but I don't have to get wet."

Kaitlynne wasn't the only film festival guest who watches paddling films online.

Geoff Radbourn, an educational assistant who works as a paddling instructor during the summer months, said he makes a habit of watching videos, too.

"For me, this is what I do for a living, when I'm not out teaching," he said.

Radbourn said the videos online and at the festival help to showcase different locations and also the skills and techniques of different athletes.

"When I leave, I'm like, 'let's go on an adventure!'" said Joleen Thomas, who brought her three kids to the festival.

David Gillespie, president of WhiteWater Ontario, spoke to the crowd before the show about the importance of the Gull River whitewater reserve.

"Whether you're into padding – competitive or you're a recreational user – whether you're an angler or enjoy the trails, we all have a connection to that area."

Sandra Dabrowski, Amanda Mackie and Angie Grant shared information about Bark Lake Leadership and Conference Centre while at the Reel Paddling Film Festival on June 9. /Sue Tiffin STAFF

News celebrity to host Katie's Run for Epilepsy

For years, people with epilepsy have been keeping relatively quiet about their condition. But for some that just isn't possible, like when your first seizure happens on live television while reporting the news. That is what happened to Mark McAllister, former journalist with Global News, in March of 2011.

McAllister's life changed immediately. Soon after this incident, he was told the cause of his slurred speech that day was epilepsy. Since then, he has been speaking publicly and educating others about the condition. He works closely with Epilepsy Toronto, dedicating his time to helping others who are living with epilepsy.

McAllister will be the special guest host at the sixth annual Katie's Run for Epilepsy on Saturday, June 24 at the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School. The event features a 5K and 10K run, a 2.5K walk/run, an auction, an impressive collection of donated prizes, medals, food, face painting and more.

This year, organizers have partnered with EpLink, the epilepsy research program of the Ontario Brain Institute. All funds raised will be tripled, which explains this year's fundraising goal of $33,334. Multiplied by three, this would result in $100,000 going towards much needed epilepsy research, essentially doubling what has already been raised in the first five years of this event that keeps getting bigger every year. Considering that $30,000 was raised in 2016, this is a realistic goal and organizers are counting on their dedicated sponsors, donors, fundraisers and participants to help them reach it.

The website, www.katiesrun.ca, is the place to go to show your support by making a donation, pledging a participant, registering for one of the events, or setting up a fundraising page.
